

CENTRAL ASIAN MEDICAL UNIVERSITY

■ FERGANA, UZBEKISTAN

Fergana, Uzbekistan

Fergana, Uzbekistan, is a vibrant city in the Fergana Valley, known for its rich cultural heritage, silk production, and agricultural abundance. Founded in 1876, it serves as an economic hub with thriving textile, food processing, and handicraft industries. The city features wide, tree-lined boulevards, Soviet-era architecture, and landmarks like the Fergana Regional Museum. Nearby attractions include the historic Kokand and Margilan, famous for its silk factories. Fergana offers a blend of Uzbek traditions and modern development, with bustling bazaars like Kumtepa selling fresh produce, spices, and handmade crafts. The region's fertile soil supports cotton, fruit, and wine production. With a mild climate and hospitable locals, Fergana is a gateway to Central Asia's scenic and cultural treasures.
